Garments Galore

Men's 1920's Wool Swim Wear

Women's 1920's Wool Swim Wear

This pair of suits is hanging back at the client's beach house. The man's suit is a two-piece. The woman's is also a two-piece suit; however, it has capped sleeves for modesty!

A simple dark weathered frame and a sandy colored linen gives a casual and relaxed feel.

Japanese Child's Butterfly Obi Belt

The client wore this obi belt as a child living in Japan with her military family. It is sewn onto the silk matting with silk threads and padded to help maintain the shape of the bow. The frame is a 5 1/2" deep gold and black shadow box.

Generational Christening Gown

Three children have worn this contemporary gown, so far... It is sewn on to the blue silk, but should the need arise... snip, snip, and it's ready to be worn again! The puffy sleeves and the body of the dress are padded to enhance the details and pleating of the gown.

Yellow Pages Paper Dress

The client wanted a modern presentation. The dress was sewn onto a black linen background and was enclosed with an acrylic box.

The first paper dress was sold in 1966 and made of a material similar to dry baby wipes. Clothing designers and household goods manufacturers marketed these dresses to women for advertisement purposes. Within a few years the popularity of paper dresses had faded as they easily caught fire!

*1904 Boy's Victorian Gown
(Reverse of Garment)*

The details of the lace trim and buttons made the back of this hand-sewn gown more beautiful than the front!

It is sewn to a silk mat. The glass is etched with a pattern taken from the lace trim at the bottom of the gown. The Victorian style frame with clipped corners further enhances the presentation of the garment.

*Texas Copperheads
Arena Football Jersey
(Houston)*

It's a jersey!

This shadow box is to commemorate the inaugural game of the Copperheads. Along with the jersey, this shadow box houses the game brochure, ticket stubs, field passes, and the schedule. The frame is a tall black shadow box with a gold wedge shaped lip.
